Kuwait acts to stem crisis

KUWAIT, Oct. 5 (R) - The prime minister of Kuwait Tuesday promised further reforms to deal with a crisis in the country: stock exchange, in addition to a government decree issued two weeks ago.

Sheikh Saad Al-Abdulla Al-Sabah also told the National Assembly (parliament) that the recent government measures to deal with the crisis would be used to curb and not to protect market manipulators. The problem arose when a fall in share prices due largely to the Iran-Iraq war resulted in many investors being unable to honor post-dated checks. They had used the checks to buy shares they expected to appreciate before the checks fell Checks with an estimated face value of $14 billion are expected to mature in the next few months, with a peak likely in May. The government decree issued two weeks ago laid down that all business deals for settlement with post-dated checks must be registered within 30 days.

The decree suspended bankruptcy cases, and said that any disputes resulting from post-dated payments would be dealt with by arbitration committees headed by a judge. Sheikh Saad said: "It (the decree) will not be used to protect manipulators, who will he taken on court." Other steps would be taken to reform dealing methods in the market, he added. Assembly sources said many of its 50 members were very critical of the government for resorting to decree rather than the law court. The decree will be debated next Saturday, Monday and Tnesday.

The assembly was summoned from summer recess Tuesday, six days early, to endorse the tough decree reflecting government concern about the stock market. The market ranks eighth in the world, with a 1981 turnover of 1.9 billion Kuwain dinars ($6.5 bil-

Shultz to continue talks with Gromyko

Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko conferred for almost five hours here Monday on the major disagreements which separate Washington and Moscow.

"The fact that the dialogue will go on is the only positive aspect" of the talks the two had Monday and last week on the fringe of the U.N. General Assembly session here, according to a senior State Department official who would not be named. The official said the talks - some eight bours in all - had been held in a "serious and non-polemical" atmosphere.

The two men, he said, spoke at length about the situation in Lehanon and the Gulf conflict. "Despite their disagreement on the means to reach a viable Mideast settlement. (Continued on page 2)

Convict confesses killing 25 women

DAYTONA BEACH, Florida, Oct. 5 (AFP) — A convicted murderer sentenced to life in prison has confessed to killing at least 25 women in Florida since 1969, police said here Monday.

Gerald Stano, now 31, was arrested in 1980 for stabbing a woman of illfame and later was given a life term after admitting three killings. Since then be has described to Sergeant Paul Crow, who is in charge of the investigation, how he murdered a total of 25 women. He has supplied details which, in addition to police, only the killer could know.

Sgt. Crow, describing the prisoner as a "cunning" man who "doesn't have a conscience," said Stano had hinted be might have other slayings to confess. Police said the killer appeared to have committed his crimes as a form of vengeance against his mother and his wife, who he considered had persecuted him.

A prosecuting attorney said that Stano, who could be tried and sentenced to death, might have confessed "to relieve himself of his own problems."

PARIS, Oct. 5 (AP) - New West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl paid a flying visit to Paris Monday, only three days after being sworn in, to assure France that West Germany's approach to Europe "bas signified and does signify, above all, Franco-German friendship.

Kohl and President François Mitterrand made brief press statements after the private meeting and then working dinner with leading ministers which constituted Kohl's first foreign contact as chancellor. Mitterrand described the talks as having covered "the broad political directions of the two countries and the problems of the organization of Europe and of security."

He stressed the need to maintain and deepen Franco-German relations, which he described as "relations of friendship and work in common, as much on the hilateral level as within the (European) Community and the (North Atlantic Treaty) Alliance." Mitterrand noted there would be a regular Franco-German summit meeting later this month at which the subjects would be discussed in much greater detail, particularly, be said, hy the respective ministers of defense and foreign affairs. Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who continues as

Intruder sent to mental

LONDON, Oct. 5 (AP) — Michael Fagan, who crept into Queen Elizabeth II's palace bedroom for a chat in July, was ordered to a top-security mental hospital Tueday by Judge James Miskin at London's Old Bailey Criminal Court.

The 30-year-old man screamed abuse at the judge during the proceedings and hailed off by guards. The move came after psychiatrists warned that Fagan, who claims he is in love with the 56-year-old monarch, should be detained in a mental hospital indefinitely because he posed a danger to the queen.

Miskin ordered the committal to Park Lane Mental Hospital near Liverpool after Fagan had pleaded guilty to taking a car without the owner's consent in London last Miskin said he was making the order under section 60 of Britain's Mental Health Act. "This is neither a punishment nor a sentence. He will be received there as a patient, not as a criminal." he said.

Fagan was hundled from the court by prison guards after screaming at the judge: go to bell" This is a fascist country."

Psychiatrist George Grant said Monday Fagan was "an unstable individual" who suf-fered schizophrenia. Defense psychiatrist John Bradley conceded Fagan was "a real risk" and should be in a secure hospital.

Miskin's order was the latest in an episode that came to light July 9, when Fagan penetrated royal security at Buckingham Palace to reach the queen's private bedroom and sit on her hed talking with ber for 10 minutes.

80m gallon water project SWCC conducts final tests

JUBAIL, Oct. 5 (SPA) - The Saline Water Conversion Corporation is conducting final tests for the operation of 16 desalting units under a project aimed at producing a total 80 million gallons of drinking water a day here, a corporation spokesman said

The spokesman, Ahmad Al-Mudayham, acting director of the corporation's Eastern Province hranch, said that the water will be pumped to Riyadh by the end of the year. The corporation is at present testing the pressure level in the water pipeline running from here

The first electric power generating units for the second phase of the project were recently handed over. These units have a capacity of 130 Megawatts a day. A similar unit will he handed over within the coming two months. Work is underway now on the first boiler of which will be streamlined next month with an initial capacity of ten million gallons of water per day and 150 Megawatts of electricity. The project will supply Alkhobar, Dammam, Dhahran Airport, Sayhat, Qatif, Safwi and Rahima, as well as the residential complex at the project station in Alkhobar. Seven mixing stations in these cities will go into operation as the pumping of the project's water starts. Mudayham said that a housing complex for the corporation's staff in Alkhohar was recently completed and is now being furnished. The compound is made up of 463 units that cost SR3 million. Soon also, an integrated compound for the corporation's staff in Juhail with 500 units, eight schools, four kindergartens and five mosques will be handed over. Alkhobar's saline water conversion project Saudi telex service breaks records, million messages sent each month

JEDDAH, Oct. 5 - There are 13,500 telex subscribers in Saudi Arabia who send one million telexes and make 1.5 million calls a month, Al -Mesa 'eyyak reported Monday. It quoted a spokesman for Saudi Telex who said that the first telex machine was installed in the Kingdom in 1974. Since then the practice has been spreading and 60 percent of all telex messages now are international.

The Saudi telex network comprises telex exchanges, condensers and T.D.M. units as stations connected with dispatching machines. There are three telex exchanges in Riyadh, Jeddah and Dammam for both local and international contacts. The condensers link the subscribers with the exchanges, thus shortening long connection lines.

As for the T.D.M. devices, they convey 40 cables or telex circuits through one and the same sonar circuit, which also helps reduce the number of transmission lines. Teleprinters are usually installed in subscribers' offices for a SR2,000 fee per unit, as subscription fees, in addition to an annual SR7,000 fee. Internal telex messages cost the same as internal telephone calls, and the same applies to international telex rates. They slightly differ from telephone rates, depending on the country being contacted.

The Saudi telex network is among the most advanced in the world. For every 10,000 telex subscribers there are 14 telex lines, a huge ratio if compared with the rest of the the world where each 10,000 subscribers have only four telex lines. The telex network in the Kingdom is stead ily undergoing a rapid expansion. About 3,000 more telex connections are established every year. The spokesman said that all telex operations in the Kingdom come under the supervision of Saudi Telephone, mainly because most telex exchanges, condensers and T.D.M. connections in the Saudi telephone and telex huildings benefit from phone lines to link the subscribers through the

Rain making studied by KAU experts

Arab News Staff

IEDDAH, Oct. 5 — A government agency is studying various aspects of the rain-makine technique in the Southern Region of Saudi Arabia. Experts from the King Abdul Aziz University will try to improve rainfall by cloud-seeding for a year-long period. The professors will undertake the research project on behalf of the Meteorological and Environment Protection Administration

Dr. Nizar J. Tawfiq, director general, National Meteorological and Environment Center (NMEC) told Arab News Tuesday that an agreement will soon be signed between MEPA and King Abdul Aziz University for research cooperation. Under the terms of the agreement, professors from the University will undertake research on projects specified by MEPA relating to meteorology and environmental protection.

This agreement will give university teachers a chance to participate in applied research," Tawfig said. Another project to be undertaken soon under agreement is the preparation of a mathematical model for weather prediction.

He said the NMEC center in Jeddah which receives weather information via satellite. will assume greater importance as it will become the central forecasting office for the entire Kingdom. It will begin to provide weather forecasts on a national basis.

At present weather forecasting stations are scattered throughout the Kingdom like Jeddah, Riyadh and Dhahran.

Dr. Tawfiq also said the NMEC center is functioning as an important data base for environmental and climatological information. This will help a great deal in predicting severe weather conditions and detecting oil spills. It will also help in finding out the route the oil spill is likely to take.

Telephones become an essential tool, few 'technical errors' are corrected

Riyadh Bureau

RIYADH, Oct. 5 — The telephone has become an essential and ubiquitous communication tool in the Kingdom, and Riyadh alone has 170,000 of them, plus 600 public call boxes installed at various strategic points

Almost the whole system is computerized, including the billing department, but errors still occur nonetheless, just as they do anywhere else in the world where computers have taken over. But, in the words of one Saudi Telephone official in Riyadh, the errors are few and far between and not as enormous as they are made out to me by some people.

Another technical error also has been discovered by the telephone authorities here. It is the disconnection that occurs when someone makes a call.

Immediately the person called lifts the receiver, the call is abruptly disconnected. But by that time the call bas been registered and appears in the bill at the end of the month. While this general error is being rectified, the official clarified that any amount so charged is deductible.

Also deductible from a telephone bill are amounts shown as outstanding but which have actually been paid. This occurs when payment is made after the expiry of the due date, by which time the computer has already carried forward the amount which is shown as unpaid in the bill for the month that follows. But, once proof of payment is shown the amount is off-set, the official said.

German-Saudi trade registers 64.5% increase

JEDDAH. Oct. 5 - The most recent German-Saudi Arabian trade statistics show that German exports to the Kingdom have reached 4.350 million Deutsche Mark in the first half year 1982. That means an increase of 64.5 percent compared to the first six months of 1981.

Saudi Arabia is once again the most important trade partner for the Federal Republic of Germany in the Near and Middle East. While Germany could increase its exports to Saudi Arabia by 64,5 percent, the average growth rate with the whole Arab world was only 51,6

Saudi exports to the Federal Republic of Germany remained with 6.161 million Deutsche Mark nearly unchanged. With a trade volume of 10.512 million Deutsche Mark nearly half (exactly 46,5 percent) of the German-Arab trade is done with Saudi

Mina Hospital performed 60 Eid surgeries

MINA, Oct. 5 — A total of 60 operations were performed on pilgrims by surgeons at Mina Public Hospital until the first day of Eid-Al-Adha, Okaz reported. The surgeries included an appendictomy, six deliveries and placement of plaster casts. One woman gave birth to twins.

According to Dr. Ahmad Mustafa Erqsoos, the hospital's general supervisor, some 15,893 persons were cared for at the outpatient clinic between Sept. 22-27. Among them 326 cases were admitted, including 123 heat or sunstrokes. The official asserted that there was not a single case of epidemic or contagious disease.

80 'best' farmers to be honored

AHSA, Oct. 5 (SPA) — Ahsa's irrigation and Drainage Department will hold a special ceremony here, Oct. 10, to distribute incentive prizes to the best farmers in the area that produces palm trees, fruit and vegetables and other field crops. The area is also famous for apiculture (bees an honey).

Eastern Province Governor Prince Muhammad ibn Fahd Al-Jiluwi will honor the ceremony.

British firm names Saudi representative

LONDON, Oct. 5 (LPS) Anhali Trading Establishment of Riyadh has been named the new representative in the Kingdom for TWIL Handling Systems of Nottingham, England, at the same time the firm has opened a new office in Dubai. "Appointing a distributor and opening an office will allow us to give our customers in the Middle East faster and better service," said Mike Thompson, director and general manager of the company.

Some people have made complaints that they are at times billed for calls they never made. When such complaints are received by Saudi Telephone the matter is thoroughly investigated first with the parties concerned. and after ascertaining the veracity of the complaint the amount is off-set. In most cases the subscriber who did actually dial the number(s) in question is located and is debited accordingly.

The last day for settling a hill is shown on the bill itself, and though defaulters will eventually have their telephones disconnected, the procedure — which includes repeated automatic reminders — that is followed before a disconnection is made does not make for swiftness and the subscriber is given a lot of leeway before the instrument is finally disconnected.

It is a four-stage procedure, and the first one is to call all subscribers with no P.O. boxes and inform them that their bills are Second, all subscribers - with or without P.O. boxes — are advised to collect and settle their bills as soon as possible.

Third, individual subscribers who have not settled their hills are reminded and warned of possible disconnection.

The fourth and final stage concerns the defaulter, and this is the stage when he is told that his telephone is due for disconnection the following day.

Making bill payment through banks — say, by hank order — is being carefully studied and, in fact, a special committee consisting of members drawn from the Ministry of P.T.T., the Ministry of Finance and SAMA (Saudi Arabian Monetary Agency) has been set up for this purpose and its findings are expected

An expansion project is being considered. and those areas which cannot be reached now will have to await its implementation.

Phone use by pilgrims increased

MINA, Oct. 5 - Pilgrims this year made a record number of long distance calls during the ritual days, Okaz reported. They made thousands of calls from telephone centers to various countries, according to Ayman Erqsoos, director of the subscribers department and supervisor general of international telephone cabins and coin pooths in the holy places.

The advanced equipment has been of great belp as ten calls could be made at a time by each operator. Coin phones were increased threefold and spread all over the holy places which made it easy for the pilgrims to make internal calls.

There were 141 such booths more than last year. A caravan with 12 phones was also made available to the pilgrims to cope with their buge number. More than SR200,000 was collected in coins in return for such calls, the official said.

Lebanese Army rounds up hundreds of foreigners

BEIRUT, Oct. 5 (AP) — The Lebanese Army on Tuesday rounded up hundreds of Lebanese, Palestinians and foreigners and confiscated hidden weapons in the army's biggest show of force since the 1975-76 civil war. Military officials refused to say how many people had been arrested or what arms had been seized, but reporters saw trucks filled with suspects, some blindfolded, being driven away. Security sources said 450 people had been arrested.

Soldiers closed the streets in the central shopping district of West Beirut and checked documents of pedestrians and people in automobiles. They blocked street corners with armored personnel carriers and small tank-type vehicles as soldiers with bullhorns warned residents to cooperate.

Palestinian refugees claim the move is intended to intimidate them and force them out of the country. Western diplomatic sources said those being arrested included Palestinians - some whose papers were in order - as well as Pakistanis, Asians, and other foreigners without residency permits.

Turkey refutes Armenian claims

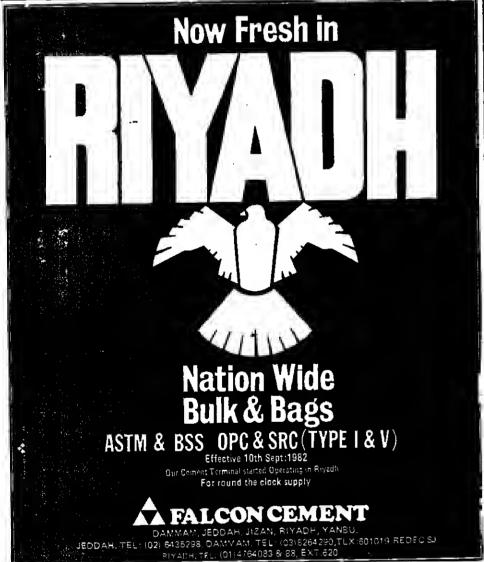

UNITED NATIONS, Oct. 5 (AP) -Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has dismissed as "Monsense" allegations by Armenian groups that 1.5 million Armenians were massacred by Turks during World War

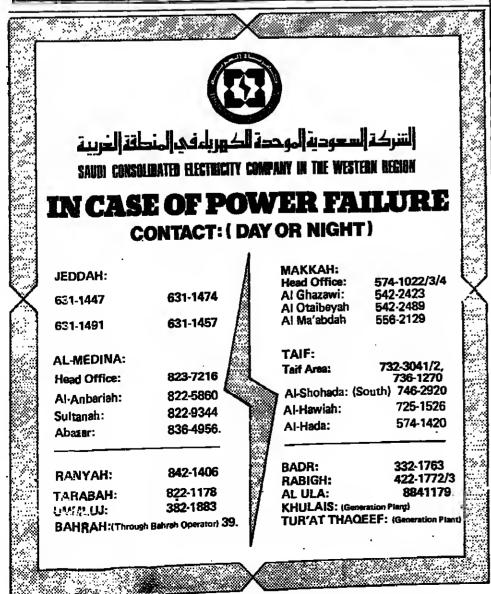

Although Turkish officials have been reluctant to comment on the allegation in the past, Turkmen Monday devoted part of his address to the U.N. General Assembly to relate the Turkish version of the history of Armenians in his country. The 67-year-old issue is a factor in a recent series of attacks on Turkish diplomats by Armenian terrorist groups.

"An intensive propaganda campaign, based on a blatant falsification and distortion of history stands behind these vile acts of Turkmen said.

Four major Armenian groups bave claimed responsibility for the deaths of more than 24 persons in terrorist attacks against Turkey since 1973. In the most recent attacks, nine persons were killed and about 70 others injured at the Ankara Airport August 7. A Turkish diplomat in Canada and another in Bulgaria were killed in attacks Aug. 27 and Sept. 9.

Haig OK'd Israeli blitz, Carter says

ALSIP, Illinois Oct. 5 (AP) - Someone in the administration of President Ronald Reagan, probably former Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr., gave the "green light" for the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, former President Jimmy Carter says.

Citing unidentified Israeli sources, Carter said Monday night, "I believe my informa-tion is accurate, and I believe that green light came from Gen. Haig."

President Reagan has previously denied giving a go-ahead for the invasion.

But Carter said Washington could bave averted the invasion, and added that had the United States "acted forcefully" after the invasion began, "Israel might bave stopped" after its forces had moved 40 kms into Leba-

Carter, speaking at a wide-ranging news conference preceding a $50-a-plate campaign dinner for Illinois Representative Martin Russo, also said that now that Americans have seen the results of the Israeli action, there is widening rift between the United States and Israel.

Former Iraqi leader buried

NICOSIA, Oct. 5 (AP) - Former Iraqi President Field Marshal Ahmad Hassan Al-Bakr was buried Tuesday, a day after his death following a long illness, the official Iraqi News Agency, INA, announced. A presidential statement announcing Bakr's death did not specify the nature of his illness.

Bakr, 68, was known to be suffering from heart trouble. He served as president for 11 vears, from July 1968 until July 1979 when he resigned for health reasons, to be succeeded by the current President Saddam Hussein.

Bakr was born in the town of Tikrit in 1914. He graduated from the teachers trainmg college and later joined the army, graduating from the military academy in 1939 as a lieutenant.

He was one of the key officers that organized the overthrow of the Iraqi monarchy in 1958. But a year later he was arrested for political activities and forced to retire from the army, escaping imprisonment. He was named vice president and prime minister in 1963 when Gen. DOLLAR OPPRESSION

The major European currencies and the Japanese yen have been battered by the U.S. dollar for so long that their combined losses against it must be astronomical and there has been little they could do to stem the tide of this unfair competi-

Beginning this week, the dollar has been scaling new heights against all the European currencies and the yen as a result of artificially devised tactics in Washington to raise the price of the dollar and reduce the cost to the U.S. of foreign imports. At first. American bank interests were set very high to attract capital from Europe and other countries into its banks and away from those of Europe and Japan. This did the trick of flooding the U.S. with foreign capital at the expense of other money markets. Then, the U.S. government delved into its own money market to borrow heavily after it had created an absurdly deficit budget to please President Reagan's rank capitalist bankers in his cabinet and those who supported him in the higher monetarist echelons of the ruling party.

Then the government engineered a surge of money supply. four oillion dollars above the officially anticipated figure, making it difficult for the central bank to ease the interest rate which means again enticing foreign capital into American

As the Europeans counted their losses against the dollar, the U.S. was enraged because some of them agreed to supply parts for the Soviet gas pipeline to Europe at a fraction of the estimated losses against the U.S. currency.

While the U.S. has been unjustly treating its allies in Europe and Japan, the latter have been slow to retaliate or at least to save their own skin from the deliberate American onslaught. They have dilly-dallied and allowed the Americans to smash their economies to bits without putting up a meaningful fight. They should have engaged the U.S. in kind by raising their interest rates and protecting their currencies the best way they could. But they preferred to stay put and let the U.S. gnaw at their economic interests and woo world investors from Europe to the U.S.

It is not too late to start fighting back at least to restore the credibility of the European market in foreign eyes rather than let the U.S. run away with all the loot unchallenged.

And while Brezhnev was appealing in July to has stood on the sidelines of the Lebanese conflict, plainly frustrated at its powerlessness to influence the course of events and clearly hoping that American mediation will backfire and further isolate

Washington from the Arab world. From a Soviet perspective, the mass killing of Palestinian civilians in Beirut would appear to offer Moscow a singular opportunity for a propaganda payoff in its long waiting game. The Kremlin has responded to the tragedy with a series of official statements and press commentaries telling Arab countries that the slaughter of innocents is the price they can expect to pay for trusting in American Arab east, blood is spilled there.

"Streams of blood and heaps of corpses in Beirut's Palestinian camps, such is the value of the guarantees of Washington, which promised security for Beirut's inhabitants," an official Soviet government statement declared after the scores of bodies were discovered in two of the city's refugee camps.

In a subsequent message addressed to "Comrade Yasser Arafat," President Leonid Brezhnev told the Palestine Liberation Organization leader and the Arab world at large that "if anyone had illusions that Washington will support the Arabs, now these illusions have dissolved in the streams of blood in the Palestinian camps."

Less authoritative but more vitriolic Soviet commentaries, relayed to the Middle East by the official Tass news agency and Radio Moscow, have sought to convey the impression not only that Israeli troops conducted the massacre hul that they did so with the U.S. State Department's foreknowledge. The killing was done Sept. 16-18 by Lebanese Christian militiamen allied with the Israelis.

"Washington knew in advance about the forthcoming atrocious crime," Tass said in a report from Washington that attributed the charge, in approving terms, to the "Palestinian information bureau." believed to be the PLO's Palestine Information

Even if they are believed, such charges are not easily translated into practical advantage for the Soviets in the Middle East. But the working assumption appears to be that anything damaging to American prestige is useful to Moscow. At the same time, the current stream of Soviet propaganda - and the flow of commentaries, warnings and pronouncements of the past three months - has underscored Moscow's peripheral role in the Lebanese conflict, essentially that of a spectator heckling from the bleachers. Foreign diplomatic observers note that the conflict has brought the Soviets a series of stinging disappointments — the ineffectiveness of Soviet weapons in Syrian hands. the PLO evacuation from West Beirut, the trust that the Lebanese, Syrians and even the PLO placed in American diplomacy and the initial success of that diplomacy.

Moscow, by contrast, has found itself limited to appeals to third parties to secure peace - including a series of letters from Brezhnev to Presideot Reagan - while simultaneously criticizing disunity among Arabs and their failure to come to the aid of

In one remarkably blunt, Arabic-language broadcast in the thick of fighting on July 28, Moscow's radio "Peace and Progress" lashed out at the "treacherous laziness of some Arab regimes" and urged the Arab world to invoke economic sanctions against the United States. On at least two occasions in the past two months, Soviet commentators -

The leading government newspaper Izvestia labeled Habib "a mouthpiece for the aggressor" and, neatly inverting cause and effect, added that "whenever the sinister figure of Philip Habib appears in the

The Soviets, according to diplomatic analysts, were taken aback at the relatively warm reception hat some Arah states and even to Reagan's Sept. 1 proposal for Palestinian self-rule in association with Jordan on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip. But Moscow drew almost no reaction at all when Brezhnev unveiled a six-point summary of the Soviet position

Sept. 15.

The Soviet Union's overriding objective in the Middle East, in the view of specialists here, is to gain an equal role with the United States in shaping the terms of a settlement between Israel and the Arabs. This would entail abandoning the 1978 Camp David accords that led to an Americanarranged peace between Israel and Egypt and effectively excluded Moscow from the center of Middle Eastern diplomacy.

The Kremlin has consistently and bitterly opposed the Camp David peace process and contends that by eliminating Egypt as an antagonist, the accords arranged by President Jimmy Carter ultimately emboldened Israel to strike northward with the aim of imposing a similar separate peace on Lebanon. Moscow favors shifting the arena of negotiations to an international conference involving Israel and its neighbors and the United States. the Soviet Union and the PLO - a proposal endorsed thus far by Syria, the PLO and Jordan.

Lately, Moscow has been urging the U.N. Security Council to take the initiative in securing peace in Lebanon, a step that would give the Soviet Union an opening to its long-sought role by virtue of its permanent membership on the Security Council.

Historically, the Soviet Union has had no cental role in Middle East diplomacy - at least in part. one Western European diplomat observes, because the Soviet Union bas bad no supreme strategic interests there as the United States, France and Britain bave. "The Soviets have no fundamental role in the Middle East, and they can't get a role just by claiming it, which is what they're trying to do," this diplomat said.

The Soviets are believed to hunger for a larger hand in Middle Eastern affairs, partly for prestige - in the belief that this ought to be one of the attributes of a great power. Long-range Soviet goals almost certainly look to the erosion of American and European "imperialist" power in a geopolitical bridge linking three confinents that is vital to the economies of the Western industrial powers.

"The Soviets want to prevent others from settling the issue without them," one Western specialist said. He added, "Of course they say the (Lebanese conflict) is close to their borders, but there doesn't seem to be much thinking behind this in practical terms. It's more a justification for Soviet interest."

Opportunities for Moscow to lever its way into a decisive role in the Middle East are as limited now as before the Lebanese conflict began, in the view of foreign analysts.

With the possible exception of impoverished South Yemen, the Soviet Union has no close ideological soulmates in the region. The Soviets have economic ties and friendship treaties with Iraq, Libya and Syria, but each for its own reasons currently offers a poor place from which to project, Soviet power and influence.

Iraq is preoccupied by its long war with Iran. Libya, for all its oil wealth and Soviet military hardware, poses a less than formidable force and is in any case unhappy about Moscow's war against freedom fighters in Afghanistan. Syria and Iraq are Syria, one Mideastern analyst observes, "is a vivid example of Soviet impotence in the region." The capital of Damascus is geographically vulnerable to Israeli attack. Soviet-Syrian relations appear to be back on an even keel after complaints from Damascus about the quality of Soviet arms." The two countries have a friendship treaty that calls for consultations if Syria is threatened but Moscow has been careful to restrict its commitments to Syria to avoid being drawn into a direct confrontation with the United States - a limiting factor, Western analysts believe, in all of the Soviet Union's Middle East calculations.

As a consequence, the Soviets have been resupplying Syria with enough weapons to replace those it lost in Lebanon - with some improvements in quality - but Moscow is said to have refrained from a military buildup that would invite preemptive Israeli attack or encourage Syrian bravado. Moreover, the Soviets bave spurned Syria's requests, the most recent on June 20, to sign a strategic alliance to further guarantee its security against Israel.

Moscow would improve its chances of a diplomaric role in the Middle East with a breakthrough in relations with Egypt, or Jordan, but experts foresee no such dramatic turns in the near future.

Soviet overtures to Egypt after the assassination of President Anwar Sadat a year ago seem to have evaporated, and the Soviets are back to accusing Egypt of selling out to the imperialists and indirectly of fomenting Israeli aggression. "They've handled Egypt very clumsily," one Western special-

The Soviets would like to open formal diplomatic relations with Arab Gulf states - Kuwait is the only one with an embassy in Moscow - but this appears to remain a long-shot bope. Soviet relations with Jordan, on the other hand, bave warmed perceptively in the past year, although Moscow is still considered to be far from gaining real diplomatic leverage through Amman.

None of this is likely to discourage the Soviet Union in its quest for influence in the Middle East. As a country that measures its own social progress by the yardstick of czarist living standards in 1913. it can be said to take the long view of events. Motivated by a proclivity for chess on a global scale, the Soviet Union continues to play a waiting game, exploiting as best it can opportunities as they arise.

in Turkey Language controversy rages

ISTANBUL -The military rulers may have quashed the political turmoil that threatened to tear Turkey apart, but the left-right struggle continues on a new, more subtle battleground - linguistics. The military seized power two years ago in a bloodless coup after years of terrorist violence. In place of political discussion, which was banned, newspapers and intellectuals now release their animosities in relentless arguments over old versus new vocabulary, a subject rife with political meaning.

The left, represented by the daily Cumhuriyet newspaper, favors making current Turkish common usage part of the recognized vocabulary. Conservatives, especially the right-wing Tercuman newspaper, defend the use of the older Arabic and Persian words in the Turkish language. The clash between purification and preservation dates to the 1920s and 30s, when Kemal Ataturk, the founder of modern Turkey, launched a cultural revolution aimed at Westernizing its Islamic charac-

In 1928. Ataturk abolished Arabic script and decreed that Turkish alphabet be written in the Latin alphabet. Within a few months all books newspapers and singns were in the new alphabet. Special crash courses for adults were organized to teach people to read and write the new way. Government officials hoped that adopting the easier-to-learn Latin alphabet would reduce illiteracy. Politically, the change cut Turks off from their Ottoman past and separated them from their Arab and Persian neighbors. The change in alphabet spurred a campaign to cleanse the language of its Persian and Arabic elements. In 1932 Ataturk founded an organization of linguists, the Turkish Language Association, and charged it with inventing words from ancient Turkish roots to replace the older vocabulary.

Over the years the association bas brought up thousands upon thousands of new words, turning Turkish upside down. Old and familiar words have been replaced - by strange new constructions. "Okul" superseded the Arabic "mektep" for school; "devrim" became the modern term for revolution rather than "inkilap."

New editions of older books constantly update the vocabulary to conform to present-day usage. The change in vocabulary bas been so marked that today's Turk has difficulty reading a pre-World War II book. (AP)

Letter to the editor

American apathy

Dear sir, I am thoroughly fed up with the non-position in country, the United States of America, is taking u response to the massacre in Lebanon. The United States cannot be blamed for wha happened; the responsibility rests totally with Israe and whoever it let in to the Palestinian camps for the genocide: However, America can take a stand and demonstrate something other than lip service for Israel. But it will not do so unless there is enough pressure from outside to make it do so.

What American needs is an impetus; that impetus can take the form of thousands or millions of letters from individuals over the world who are shocked, aghast, displeased, angered, and just plain sickened by a needless incident brought upon by indifference of too many people to date. Such letters should be sent to members of Coness, the president, newspapers, industrialists who have foreign business ties, and anyone else who has an effect, direct or indirect, on U.S. elections and voting behavior. I would like to ask anyone that can afford the time it takes to write a letter to please at for a few minutes and write one. Whether you are Filipino

Pakistani, American, Saudi, whatever, if you are upset and want to show it about the Lebanon massacre, writing a letter to the U.S. government will help bring pressure to bear. If enough letters are sent; there is a sure payoff; the volume should embarrass the U.S. Perhaps someone in Washington will wake up to the fact that there are literally millions "over there" who don't like what is going on with American apathy. The foreign scene is the only one left that Israeli and Jewish lobbies do not control. Although there is no freedom in American media to denounce senseless Israeli actions, there is such freedom overseas. Let's make this freedom count for something by writing letters to Reagan, to Percy, to whoever it takes to get American opinion on a national level up to par with international opinion. America cannot do it alone; there is too much control from Jewish and Israeli lobbies. Your help in making America capable of making its own decisions, by sending letters of protest, will not be appreciated by the Jewish interests, but it will have a long-term effect of permitting some free choice on the part of the individual American as to what he is exposed to and what it means. We can all save some lives in Lebanon. The above is one way to get started. Please write. Frank G. Anderson

'Stranded Pakistanis' awaiting repatriation

By Atiquialem

DACCA (R) - More than 10 years after the Bangladesh war about 250,000 of its victims are still in detention camps here, hoping to be sent to their chosen homeland of Pakis-

Sometimes known as Biharis because many came to Bangladesh from the eastern Indian state of Bihar, they were put in camps after siding with Pakistan in the 1971 civil war which resulted in the creation of Bangladesh out of east Pakistan. They call themselves "stranded Pakistanis" and the Bangladesh government regards them as Pakis-

Under a 1973 agreement between India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, just over 121,000 of them were moved to Pakistan over five years. The official flow then stopped although several thousand have since managed to reach Pakistan on their own.

Although official repatriation is due to resume next month when about 5,000 will fly to Pakistan, the outlook for most is far from hright. More than 250,000 still live in badly overcrowded camps without adequate food, medical supplies, clean water or sanitation. Next month's planned repatriation, which will cost about $1.5 million is being paid for by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

Pakistan has agreed to accept the new batch on humanitarian grounds, although they do not fit into the categories set out in the 1973 Delhi agreement. Under it, Islamabad undertook to accept those born in west Pakistan (now Pakistan), former military personnel, central government employees, members of divided families and special hardship cases.

The restrictions anger those in the camps who do not fall into any of the categories. They have established a militant leadership called the Stranded Pakistanis General Repatriation Committee

Categorization like that is just an attempt to hoodwink us," said Nasim Khan, a community leader. "We have given everything for Pakistan," he said. "We have antagonized the Bengalis for the sake of Pakistan. It will be sheer betrayal if the government of Gen. Zia nl-Haq now takes the stand that we do not qualify as Pakistanis."

He threatened "extreme actions" if they were forgotten indefinitely by the rest of the world. The Biharis have already tried protest marches and hunger strikes. "Our next move is self-immolation," Nasim Khan said." What else can we do?" The alternative is what the Vietnamese boat people did. But this is not possible because Pakistan is so far away from Bangladesh by sea." he added.

Pakistani Embassy sources in Dacca say many questions apart from eligibility under the Delhi agreement are involved in repatriation of the Biharis. The higgest problem is money, an official said. Others include assimilation in Pakistan and finding suitable jobs. The official said Pakistan was already over-strained by the influx of refugees from Afghanistan and by economic recession.

Although most Biharis want to leave, a minority seem keen to stay and accept Bangladeshi nationality. One of them, Muhammad Ramisuddin, a former provincial government clerk, said the Bangladesh government sold his house after putting him in a

S. African inquest turns into trial of detention law paper during interrogation. Testimony from police witnesses revealed

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A court inquest into the jail cell death of trade union activist Neil Aggett has become a forum for detainees to air charges of torture hy security police.

The inquest has heard an affidavit from Aggett and testimony from others detained with him that police use electric shocks, iron manacles, beatings and psychological pressure to get statements and confessions.

The Internal Security Act permits indefinite detention without charge. Some imprisoned under that law say they were afraid to complain to magistrates about mistreatment by police, fearing retribution when they returned to their cells.

"In detention, one gets in a state of apprehension and helplessness," Sisa Niikalana told the court last week, "Where can you go to? You feel lost. I had no trust that if I filed a complaint that anything would happen," said Nikalana, vice president of the militant South African Allied Workers Union. He was detained from last December until August and is free on bail awaiting Njikalana said he was put in handcuffs and leg irons with a black bag over his head and was given electric shocks at one stage during his interrogation at John Vorster Square, the Johannesburg police headquarters.

That was where Aggett, a 28-year-old white organizer of black trade unions, was found hanged on Feb. 5. Police said Aggett committed suicide, but the Aggett family said that if it was suicide, it was induced by the Aggett's death provoked widespread protests against detention without charge. About 190 detainees are now being held now who have not been charged, according to the South African Institute for Race Relations. Justice Minister H.C. Coetsee defended the detention system recently in a statement released to a synod of the nation's Dutch reformed church branch for "colored" (mixed race) people. He said it was necessary because people trying to overthrow the government "do not take note of the Christian principles which are endorsed by your

Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange recently said detention practices were no worse here than in many other countries and added "I don't think you will obtain much information from a man held in a five-star hotel." Aggett was the first white to die in detention. At least 45 hlacks have died in custody of security police in the last 20 years.

Government lawyer Pieter Schabort has challenged much of the detainees' testimony during the inquest and says police will refute charges of abuse later in the inquest. The Aggett inquest, to determine whether anyone was legally responsible for the death, opened in April but was delayed until June while the government unsuccessfully challenged the admissibility of a statement Aggett made 14 hours before his death.

In the affidavit, Aggett said he was tortured twice in interrogation on the 10th floor of John Vorster. On Jan. 4, he said, he was slapped and punched. On Jan. 29, he said, he was subjected to electric shocks. George Bizos, lawyer for Aggett's family, quoted from a hanned book by former South African security agent Gordon Winter describing the "Adams' apple" technique allegedly used by security police. A wet towel would be squeezed around a detainee's neck until the victim became unconscious, Winter said. The process supposedly left no marks. Winter said some detainees were victims of miscalculation with the towel tactic.

State medical witnesses conceded it was possible Aggett had died at the hands of police and then had been hung up to make the death appear to be suicide, although they doubted that had occurred.

Another detainee, Vaurice Smithers, said he saw Aggett forced to run m place and hit with what appeared to be a rolled-up news-

Beware, the little daredevils on the road

They materialize from nowhere, shout and scream a warning in your ears, whizz past you with the speed of lightning and leave you stunned - in a state of shock and utter amazement. Well. what was it, you wonder. and before you've regained your equilibrium (the thumping heart might take a little longer to come back to normal) you hear the roar of thunder, on an otherwise cloudless day, and some rocket-like object, coming from the opposite direction, hlasts away at terrific speed. It takes time to realize that you are not actually hit, hut all the same, as they say, it was a close shave. The second shock is so sudden that you are forced in stagger into a Bagala looking for a cold drink to calm your nerves. Did you really miss an encounter with the mysterious beings from some distant galaxy? The whole thing, a phenomenon, appeared and disappeared within the fraction of a second. It couldn't have been a figment of imagination only, a sleep walker's dream! It was as real and close as toothache is. Waiting to cross a one-way road, right in the heart of Jeddah, your eyes were naturally scanning the general direction from which the traffic was coming. Ohviously there was no possibility that anything could come from the opposite direction. But then at times, one would better be prepared to face the impossible.

What could it have been anyway? Well, a calm and patient observation reveals that what you've just seen was nothing more than little kids on their mopeds, motorcycles and motorhikes. Try to wipe off the embarrassment on having been shocked so much! These kids are found roaming almost all the streets and roads of the city, especially where the traffic is the heaviest.

These young ones, in their pre and early teens are the masters of their own craft. They steer their fast moving, strange looking contraptions anywhere they like, with absolute ease; with perfect mastery and control. The firm grip of their tiny hands turns the stuhborn motorcycles into the most suhmissive and abject of slaves. There is no trick these machines can't perform on the roads, and no place they can't reach in utter obedience to the will and whims of their little masters.

They make no distinction between the pavements and the roads; between narrow alleys and wide open streets; hetween an empty space and a congested, busy intersection. The peak hours of traffic in the morning, and the late hours in the evening are one and the same to them. Likewise, they acknowledge no superiors on the roads. Their eyes don't discriminate between a buge trailer and a pedestrian; both are treated with equal respect or the lack of it.

EXTRAORDINARY: This motorcycle is certainly of extraordinary make. Spotted on a street in Helsinki, Finland, the vehicle has no fewer than 14 mirrors and 20 forward lights. No doubt, the rider would like to let people know that he is coming.

It is possible to measure the speed of lightning, to foretell the approach of a fast moving storm hut it is not easy to predict the incredible, sudden appearance of these kids who vanish as suddenly as they materialize from nowhere.

These young children, barely ten or eleven years, ("The little road-riding-hoods." - Harry C. Bauer) are not only the lords and masters of their own vehicles, they also impose and dictate their own traffic code on anything that moves around them - be it a poor pedestrian walking in the supposed safety of the footpath, a car, a truck or hus. The size or make is really no consideration for these daredevils on the roads.

The traffic rules are for the ordinary drivers of ordinary vehicles, not for these extraordinary kids with their still more extraordinary mopeds. The careless abandon with which they jump into the sea of fast moving traffic cannot but arouse the admiration of the onlooker. These fearless souls challenge even the giant lorries and trucks and hold them at bay. Oblivious and indifferent to the direction of the flow of traffic, they move in and out of the vehicular stream as they please. They might move in the opposite direction in a one-way lane or they might move in between two vehicles moving side by side.

The grim expression on the face of a driver, as he has in bring his vehicle to a screeching halt, when one of these apparitions suddenly takes a tangihle shape right under his nose, is difficult to describe. His grinding teeth and suppressed wrath are helpless against the beings who vanish as soon as they appear. The impotent rage of a car driver, as his car swerves and reels from side to side trying to avoid the phenomenon that has manifested itself in front of his windshield, increases when he confronts the angry scowls of the drivers moving on both sides. Many potentially fatal accidents are averted no doubt, but there is only a hairbreadth's difference between safety and dis-

The way these past masters in the art of driving, skilfully manage their mounts is really nobody's husiness. The way they turn, twist and move in all the directions at once requires more skill than that possessed by ordinary mortals. As their small mopeds zoom in and out of the briskly moving traffic, one holds the hreath fearing the worst. But no, they get clear of all danger, and are happily cruising away in some other street. What looked to be a certain, imminent collision, was only one of the many demonstrations of the tricks they can show on the roads.

Their motorcycles either have no horns or they are not used, but they are fully armed with engines that can raise enough din to drown the noise made by the engines of heavy trucks. The capable vocal cords of these kids also issue a sudden, shrill warning; it is a different matter that this warning is only served when this whirling rocket is almost on top of you and you involuntarily take a jump to get out the harm's way.

Ironic though it seems, it is through these little daredevils that the pedestrians get some satisfaction of seeing the motorists who keep them on the run always - baited and held in check.

Because of the sudden, unexpected appearance and disappearance of these kids on their motorhikes, it is recommended that people with weak nerves should not stand on or near the roads unless they can look in all the directions at once, because nobody can tell for certain from which direction this amazing phenomenon will materialize. Once you spot a kid on his mount, the best thing to do is to duck for safety, even if he is headed for the other direction. Who can predict the moment when the little master will wheel around and be upon you!

Museum of the future

Henry Moore finds a place on Japan's misty cliff

By William Sexton

TOKYO (N) - As with so many things better museum. So on a misty, pine-clad hluff overlooking the Pacific Ocean in Atami. near Tokyo, they have just built a spectacularly different kind of museum.

It may be the museum of the future, or at least the institution's last, best hope of avoiding replacement by videotaped home culture like Kenneth Clark's "Civilization" and Jacob Bronowski's" the Ascent of Man."

It's called the Moa Museum of Art (Moa for Mokichi Okada Association), hut it is a museum dedicated not so much to art itself as to a single idea about art: that man's highest creativity springs directly from nature's original beauty, so the two are best experienced together.

Art and nature in the same environment? The odds against enjoying the two together to park outside New York's Museum of Modern Art, much less ride there on the Long Island railroad. It would seem a sheer impossibility within the world's most crowded megalopolis, that unzoned sprawl of factories and apartments, railroad tracks and high tension lines — and 20 million people known as Metropolitan Tokyo.

With a $100-million hudget of private money, MOA's designers seized on technology to provide the necessary escape from technology, as it were. City dwellers may depart from the very center of Tokyo and within 70 minutes find themselves in a grove of pine and bamboo with a breathtaking vista of ocean at one hand, and MOA's rich collection of Chinese and Japanese art (and a handful of Western work, soon to be expanded) at the other.

The famed Bullet Train deposits you at Atami station in 55 minutes, and from there a direct bus winds up the hack streets of this five minutes. The terminus is a sheer hillside, green with vines and hushes except where a large stone entranceway leads underground. You buy your ticket there (for under $5 at the present exchange rate) and are swallowed in a huge upward-leading tunnel lined by escalators. In all, there are four banks of escalators, each angled away from the last to minimize the awareness of depth. A wild vista of forest and sea springs forth where the tunnel emerges into daylight, high above Atami.

Presiding over this plaza carved into the hillside is Henry Moore's "King and Queen," an oversized bronze of a man and woman seated, their placid gaze directed toward the wooded islands in Sagami Bay and the Pacific Ocean beyond. As the tunnel cordons off the city from nature, Moore's figures establish the new connection between nature and art.

The museum's only task is to be imobtrusive. It is hrilliantly so - built of softspoken Indian sandstone to hlend into the hillside, the surrounding forest intact in every view from inside. Even the gallery lighting is cleverly contrived to obscure the presence of the huilding itself.

In the Japanese home, decoration cons at not of walls covered with pictures, bu. a corner with a single piece of art appropriate to the mood or the season — a flower arrangement, a woodhlock print or perhaps a homemade piece of origami (folded-paper sculpture). MOA follows that tradition: a Monet painting of lily has one large room all to itself, and a Maillol sculpture another. And though the museum has more than 3,000 items to choose from in its permament collection it is meticulous in avoiding a sense of clutter in the galleries of Oriental art.

There is also a Noh theater for classical Japanese drama, and a replica of Kyoto'a. imperial teahouse of gold.
Compared to MOA, the other radically innovative museum project of recent years, the Pompidou Center in Paris, offers an atmospheric mix of Charles de Gaulle Airport and Times Square, husy beyond belief. Here there's a palpable air of reverence in the place and its personnel as one might expect to find in a Gothic cathedral or Buddhist monastery - and quite appropriately so.

The museum of art is an arm of the Church of World Messianity founded by Mokichi Okada (the MO of MOA) after World War

Okada was an unconventional genius born 100 years ago this year in Tokyo. Misfortune stalked the man throughout his life: one career as a painter was ahruptly terminated hy eye disease, another as a creator of lacquer inlay by a hand mjury. He lost his wife and child in childhirth.

His later career as a wholesaler was marvelously successful, hut he lost his entire fortune in the Great Tokyo Earthquake of 1923. In 1935 he dedicated himself to religion, but his efforts in establish a church hased on his eccentric ideas about esthestics and religion were banned by Japan's notorious "Thought Police" of the day.

After the country surrendered in 1945, Okada published a prescient hlueprint for the role Japan should seek in the postwar world.

"One might say that Japanese history is nothing more than a record of power struggles, the last being the Pacific War," he wrote." The Japanese people have been the greatest victims of this ceaseless strife...Yet, during the long periods of war there have been short intervals of peace in which esthetic expression flourished, and a legacy of painting. sculpture, and other decorative arts sur-

"Considering all these factors, one naturally concludes that the proper mission of Japan must be to employ the media of nature and human artistry to help enrich the higher sentiments of humankind, to give comfort and enjoyment, and to cultivate an ideology that advocates satisfaction derived from peace."

Okada died in 1955, just two days after he acquired the Japanese national treasure. "Wisteria Tea Jar," hut he already had set in train the planning for the museum, completed by his 800,000 followers in January to celebrate his centennial.

WARDHA, India. (LAT) - When a corporate executive noticed a slight numbness on his chin while shaving. he sought immediate medical attention and swore his physician to secrecy. He decided not to tell his wife, for fear it would destroy their marriage.

When a police officer's wife discovered a patch of discolored skin on her right hand. she told her husband, but they agreed that no one else, not even other members of the famity, should be told.

A 37-year-old housewife spotted a similar discoloration on her forcarm. It eventually disappeared, but her hushand now avoids her completely. All three are victims of leprosy. an ancient disease that still brings on unparalleled social ostracism despite medical advances that make it curable.

In fact, drugs have been available since the mid-1940s that can prevent the severe deformities associated with leprosy. When diagonized early, leprosy's impact can be reduced to a few innocuous skin blotches.

Under its current five-year plan, the government of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has allocated $5 million toward improving early detection and stimulating research.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Two nights ago, while dining in our favorite estaurant alone with my husband, he suddenly pointed to his throat, turned blue, and seemed to be choking to death. I called for help. At the next table, a middle-aged man jumped up, rushed over, got behind my husband, wrapped his arms around him and gave him a bear hug.

Suddenly my husband began to breathe again after a large piece of steak popped out of his windpipe. The man was not a doctor. He

Dear Mrs. Q .: One estimate is that at least a few thousand Ameri-using antibiotics in the fight against leprosy. The treatment has reportedly shown promising early results, halting progress of the disease and making infectious cases non-infectious within a few days. Combined with house-to-house surveys of the district's 900,000 people by trained teams looking for early signs of the disease. authorities hope tu have 95 percent of the estimated 2,000 infectious patients on a multiple-drug regime by the second half of next year.

If successful, the multiple-drug treatment could replace older sulfone drugs that have been used effectively for the last four decades but have proved powerless against new, sulfone-resistant forms of leprosy that have cropped up in the last few years.

Dapsone, one of the sulfone drugs, was the subject of a recent World Health Organization report. It said the development of dapsone-resistant strains of leprosy indicates that the disease should be treated with a battery of drugs rather than with a single medicine.

Work is also under way on an anti-leprosy vaccine. Dr. Vulimiri Ramalingaswamy. director general of the Indian Council of Medical Research in New Delhi, said controlled tests of two vaccines developed by Indian scientists could begin early next year. Determining the effectiveness of a vaccine could take up to 20 years, for leprosy can he dormant for as long as 15 years after initial contact, and deformities become apparent only two to five years after the disease hecomes active.

Mcanwhile, medical advances have failed to ease the social rejection, which destroys a victim more effectively than does the disease itself. "Medically, leprosy is curable, but its social stigma is not," Dr. Ramalingaswamy

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: There's a history of hreast cancer in our family. My daughter, who is only 15, is apprehensive, although she doesn't have any apparent lumps. Because of her age, our doctor has advised against her having mammography. He doesn't want to expose her to X-rays. Do you agree? - Mrs. Y.

Dear Mrs. Y .: Has he considered the use of ultrasound for examination of her breasts. This is often an effective diagnostic method, and will not expose her to radiation.

For Mr. E .: It's true that Alzheimer's disease affects at least one million Americans over the age of 65, but some in the age groups of 50s and 60s aren't immune. In the beginning, there may be symptoms such as irritability, foregetfulness and intellectual decline. But it progresses to the point that the individual can no longer take care of his basic needs. It's a stubborn brain disorder in which there's no specific treatment for deteriorating brain cells.

Hypertension Another Look said relieved Another Look by meditation

By Arjuna

COLOMBO (Depthnews) - Buddhist meditation teaches you how to relax the fatigue-ridden body and the tension-wracked brain and nervous system. But today's scientific-minded, rational people somehow have to find scientific support before they could accept that this ancient practice could be beneficial.

Now, in the West and elsewhere experiments have proved the practice of meditation hrings down blood pressure and helps to control other heart-related ailments. Recently, the British Cardiac Society has accepted the beneficial effects of meditation. says Sri Lankan Dr. Buddhadasa Bodhinayake. consultanı psychiatrist at the Harley Hospital in Essex, U.K.

According to Dr. Bodhinayake, 15 to 20 minutes of meditation in the morning and evening does more to relieve hypertension than all the medication with drugs. As a result. 68,000 British patients are now practicing Anapanasathi meditation which centers on deep breathing. Dr. Bodhinayake, who was in Sri Lanka on holiday recently, says these patients found great relief improvement in their conditions. Thirty minutes of meditation relaxes the body, which is equal to six to seven hours of sleep, he says.

He also stresses that Anapanasathi meditation has a beneficial effect on both sides of the hrain. Electroencephalograph readings have proved that this kind of meditation can synchronize the workings of both sides of the brain. It reduces a patient's oxygen needs, his heatheat, blood pressure and the breathing ப்r. Bodhinayake says an uncerstanoing of what causes high blood pressure and heart ailments makes it easier to understand why meditation helps to control them. Hypertension springs from the stresses and strains of daily living. The central nervous system wracked by emotional tensions, worry and pressures is unable to cope with the problems of daily living. A person thus affected usually suffers from severe fatigue. Even in sleep. which is necessary for recuperation, the person becomes restless.

Hypertension and heart ailments slowly or suddenly as the case may be, then emerge accompanied by symptoms like breathlessness and palpitations. In cases like this, the doctors usually say: relax, relax. But few of them can tell their patients how they can do

This is where meditation comes in. Dr. Bodhinayake says that meditation helps prevent the development of these conditions because the body releases itself of the ten-sions which have huilt up.

Peking blames Big 2 for turmoil in world munist China said Monday the quest for hegemony by the Soviet Union and the United States and their resultant global rivalry were the main sources of unrest and turmoil in the world.

In a speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua said the menace to the peace and security of the world "originates mainly from imperialism, hegemonism (domination of others) and col-

While the focus of the superpowers' global strategies remained in Europe, the developments of recent years indicated the main sphere of contention between Moscow and Washington was in the Third World, he said. "This fierce rivalry has constantly rocked the world and increased the danger of a world war," Huang said.

The overriding task of the people of the world was, therefore, to combat begemonism and maintain international peace. "The heroic struggles waged by the peoples of Afghanistan, Kampuchea and southern Africa and by the Arab people' demonstrated that unremitting struggle could upset superpower plans, be said.

On the question of Kampuchea, Huang said: "There can be no genuine scttlement of this question until Vietnam withdraws all its aggressor troops from Kampuchea." On Afghanistan, the Chinese foreign minister said Soviet armed aggression was a gross violation of the U.N. charter and a grave threat to peace in Asia and the world. The resolutions of three consecutive assembly sessions from Afgbanistan must be strictly WASHINGTON, OCK arms-control negotiator Edward L. Rowny says he is under orders from President Ronald Reagan to move as quickly as possible toward a muclear agreement with the Soviet Union.

Rowny told the Associated Press that be is returning to the Geneva talks, which reopen Wednesday, convinced that Reagan's proposal would reduce the risk of nuclear war while other proposals could increase the risk.

Reagan won't halt buildup

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 5 (Agencies) -President Ronald Reagan, confronted by demonstrators demanding a nuclear freeze, said he would not stop building weapons until the U.S. atomic arsenal equaled that of the Soviet Union. He said the nuclear weapons freeze movement is being pushed by people who "want the weakening of America." Reagan, campaigning for members of his Republican Party Monday, also blamed the nation's high unemployment rate and other economic ills on the Washington establishment, government bureaucracy and Democratic Party "big spenders" in Congress.

In a speech to a military veterans group, Reagan suggested the nuclear freeze movement is being manipulated by people who want to weaken the country's military position. His comments, be said, were prompted by the appearance of pro-freeze demonstrators outside the botel where he was speak-

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev proposed in May; or only trimming the two superpowers' stockpiles of intercontinental ballis-and other U.S. strategists reason, causes a destabilizing situation in which the risk of a first strike is grave. By this logic, the Soviets might be tempted to take advantage of their commanding lead in beavy ground missiles by launching an attack on U.S. silos. Conversely, the United States might be more inclined to open fire

before the Soviets can act on their strength. The proposal Rowny outlined during the first, six-week round of talks and now will explain in even greater detail, has as its longrange goal cutting down to an "equal ceiling" in U.S. And Soviet nuclear missile throwweight. Rowny said Reagan told bim "to move as rapidly as the situation permits" toward an agreement. In the proposed treaty's first phase, strategic warheads would be reduced by one-third. Since the Soviets bave put about 70 percent of their warbeads on land-based missiles. Reagan's proposal would narrow that important edge and, Rowny is convinced, reduce nuclear instability.

Brezhnev has dismissed the proposal as "unrealistic" and designed to "insure American superiority." As a basis for negotiations. he proposed a freeze on the modernization and deployment of strategic weapons.

But Rowny said Brezhnev's proposal would serve Soviet interests by retaining the Soviet lead in powerful ground-based mis-siles while heading off U.S. programs for new Trident II submarine missiles and the BI

America jails draft resister

SAN DIEGO, California, Oct. 5 (R) -Benjamin Sasway, the first American since the Vietnam War to be charged with refusing to register for military service, was sentenced Monday to two-and-a-half years in jail.

Sasway, 21, a college student, became the focus for civil liberties groups challenging a government order that men 18 or over should register for possible service. The order was first made in January 1980 by then President Jimmy Carter after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. President Reagan announced his support for the system last January.

Sasway said he would appeal his case. He could have been jailed for up to five years and fined $10,000. Sasway, held in jail since his conviction on Aug. 26. said in a statement before sentencing: "I still cannot in clear con-science register for the draft and I'm ready to spend the next five years in here."

Hundreds of registration opponents staged demonstrations in Sasway's support Sunday near the jail where he is held. Federal judge Gordon Thompson set bail at $10,000 pending appeal but he did not immediately free Sasway. The judge said he would release Sasway once his lawyer could ensure that he stayed in the San Diego area.

A second registration resister, Enten Eller, 20. appeared in court in Roanoake, Virginia, last August and was given 90 days to register or face jail. The courtroom Monday was packed with Sasway's supporters and dozens of people waved signs outside the courthouse. About 674,000 men have failed to register, out of a potential nine million. Sasway was the first of 70 resisters whose prosecution was ordered by the Justice Department in June. Five men, including Sasway. bave since been indicted.

CIA right upheld

Supreme Court Monday refused to force the CIA to disclose the titles and authors of books financed by the spy agency's covert publishing ventures.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that turning over data about the oncebooming project to Nation magazine editor Victor S. Navasky would burt national security. The CIA entered the book-publishing business in 1961, primarily to counter information being distributed to developing countries by the Soviet Union.

A Senate committee report said that more than 1,000 books were subsidized or sponsored by the CIA.

U.S. office opened with unusual mandate

Soviet bloc envoys face tit for tat

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP) - The U.S. State Department has opened a new office with a somewhat unusual mandate -to make life difficult for foreign diplomats whose governments mistreat American

The goal is to counter the hostile bureaucracies that U.S. diplomats, particularly in Soviet Bloc countries, must confront on everything from the provision of housing to fixing leaky taps. As of last week, the U.S.-based diplomats from offending governments have faced the prospect of dealing with the office of foreign missions, whose instructions, in the name of reciprocity, are to be just as obstructionist as foreign gov-emments are. State Department officials say the intent is not to harass foreign envoys as much as it is to induce the governments they represent to ease the constraint imposed on Americans. The til-for-lat policy will be applied against those countries where there is a pattern of discrimination against Americans. not against countries where there is a lack of facilities or skilled personnel.

The unfriendly environment Americans abroad often must face is reflected in a vari-

- These governments often skimp on the supply of telephone lines or electricity to American embassies.

- In the provision of housing, applications from Americans are given low priority. The result is housing usually is offered in undesirable locations after month-long delays. - The fees charged from Americans for plumbers, roofers, electricians and the like often are several times the going rate.

The problems are particularly acute in the Soviet Union and nations friendly to Moscow where Americans face both political hostility and government control over the distribution of goods and services.

In contrast to Moscow, a Soviet diplomat based in Washington, until now, has been able to seek out bousing and services witbout having to consult the State Department. Soviet diplomats do what Americans do: check newspaper advertisements.

Under the legislation which established the Office of Foreign Missions, the State Department could require Soviet diplomats to apply for housing through the OFM. It also could regulate the provision of telephone lines and electrical power in accordance with what the American offices in the Soviet Union are receiving. The new State Department office also will have final say over where foreign governments establish offices in the United States, the size of staff and the scope of the activines of the diplomats. The United States is limited to three offices in Moscow, two of them adjacent. The Soviets have more than three in Washington. American officials say the Soviets may be asked to reduce their number. Another advantage Soviet diplomats have is unrestricted access to American government officials. Americans in Moscow are required to set up all appointments through the Soviet diplomatic corps office. In the future, the American office may insist it does the same, The OFM also may emulate its Russian counterpart on the issue of providing repair services. Russian envoys may have to resort to the OFM for the name of a State Department-approved contractor. The speed with which the service is provided would depend on how quickly the Soviet bureaucracy attends to similar American needs in Moscow.

Mexico's exchange deficit set at $5b

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 5 (R) - Mexico expects to postpone repayment of most debts falling due in 1983 and estimates that even after such a deferral it will have a foreign exchange deficit of $5.33 billion government figures show. With foreign debts officially calculated at $77.9 billion at the end of last August, finance ministry figures obtained by Reuters also show that total interest payments on the debt are estimated at $12 billion this year and Mexico is grappling with its worst economic crisis in 50 years and was forced in August to reschedule $10 billion in foreign debts.

A sharp drop in demand for oil, the major export earner, brought the country's rapid investment expansion to a halt, caused a run on the peso which had to be devalued, and foreign exchange controls have been imposed to conserve scarce dollars.

The projections assume the government will repay $1.6 billion of principal next year. But nf medium and long-term public sector debt alone, $6.01 billion fall due next year, including $614 million of bonds and $430

Mexico is not currently repaying any principal to international banks under a 90-day deferral which was proposed to them at a meeting in New York on Aug. 20, as the country's liquidity crisis came to a head. But banks have not agreed to the payments deferral through 1983 assumed in the new figures.

The figures show that $4.65 billion of debts to international banks fall due next year and $276 million of debts to multilateral financial institutions.

An estimate of the total amount of principal owed by Mexico falling due next year, including debts owed by the private sector, was not included in the projections. But they did show that Mexico had total principal repayments of $21.88 billion falling due between August 20 and Dec. 31, 1982, as well as interest of $4.41 billion.

The principal included $7.03 billion of short-term debt, $1.56 billion of medium and debt, $6.5 billion of private Inng-term sector debt and $4.8 billion of liabilities of Mexican banks nationalized in September.

The 1982 harvest is expected to be some 1.5 billion metric tons of cereals — seven million tons above the 1981 level, the FAO said in a report.

The report also estimated that stocks of wheat and coarse grains in major cereal exporting countries had increased by 44 million tons during the 1981-82 season, nearly 50 percent higher than a year earlier.

Flight of capital blamed

Yen's decline jolts industry

TOKYO, Oct. 5 (AFP) - The steady depreciation of the yen, which appears to have caused little concern to the Japanese authorities so far, is starting to affect certain industrial sectors.

The dollar is now worth over 270 yen, the highest it has been for five years. Last year it was being traded at around 220 yen.

The steel industry, which gets all its ore and 94 percent of its coke from abroad, fears heavy losses due to currency factors. The top group, Nippon Steel, believes it may lose out this year to the tune of $70 million.

Electricity companies calculate that a one point fall in the yen in relation to the dollar costs them about $100 million a year.

The oil industry plans a price rise shortly, arguing that the yen has depreciated 15 percent and more since the last increase. Since December 1980 Japan's oil bill has risen one-fifth due to currency fluctuation, the American magazine Petroleum Intelligence Weekly has said. The Petroleum Association of Japan estimates that the industry has lost roughly $1.1 billing in the first half of this

Meanwhile, Bank of Japan Governor Harvn Maekawa said Tuesday a major cause of yen's weakness was a heavy flow of longterm capital out of Japan attracted by higher overseas interest rates. The ven's decline is hitting imports. If foreign car makers to make concessions on prices, they could have a very bad year in this market, the importing company Yanase says. Other trade sources note that foreign car sales here were only 2,529 units in the first eight months of the year, a 55 percent drop on a year earlier.

Japan Tobacco and Salt Public Corporation has just increased prices on a hundred brands of imported cigarettes. Maruzen, the leading book importer, has had to adjust its prices quarterly over the past 12 months.

A major disc importer increased its prices by 100 yen (around 40 cents) in August, and expects to carry out a similar increase next week. Coffee dealers have meanwhile, asked the government's consent for a 15 percent

In an another development, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki is expected to call for increased imports of manufactured goods into Japan at a meeting Thursday, the International Trade and Industry Ministry said Thursday.

. The news came as the U.S. dollar reached its highest level against the yen for more than five years and share prices rose sharply in Tnkyo because of belief that the weaker yen would boost exports.

Finance ministry officials said Japan was seeking joint intervention with American and West German authorities to stem the surge of the dollar against the yen.

Zaire fails to pay Belgium $21m phone bill

BRUSSELS, Oct. 5 (AP) -- Zaire has paid back less than a third of the first installment of a hefty phone and telex bill it has been ringing up with the Belgian government since 1960, Communications Minister Herman tie Croo has said.

De Croo said Monday of the total bill of almost 966 million francs ($21.5 million), 279 million francs ($6.2 million) had to be repaid by Sept. 30. Zaire repaid only 80 million france ($1.8 million) or less than a third of the first instalement by that date, he added.

The due date for the first instalement was part of the payback scheme worked out under a 1981 agreement between the governments of Belgium and Zaire.

The bill is for, among others, telephone and telex service between the Zairian Embassy here and Kinshasa. It began to build up in 1960, the year Zaire became independent from Belgium, has been the subject of many discussions between Brussels and Kin-anaian patience reaches

ACCRA, Oct. 5, (R) - Disillusion with Flight-Lieutenant Jerry Rawlings innemonth-old revolution is growing so fast in Gbana that many diplomats believe it could soon collapse if nothing is done to alleviate the people's hardships.

Bread is hardly ever to be found. Whenever a loaf is available it sells for 35 cedis ($13), more than double the daily wage of the ordinary workman.

The missing bread heads of long list of essentials now unavailable in Ghana, from eggs and meat to ballpoint pens, soap, cigarettes and matches.

There are so many arms around since the coup and tempers are so heated that just a minor incident may be the spark to something very blondy. The immediate future is not rosy," one experienced diplomat said. Land borders were closed last month, isolating Ghana from its neighbors and making shortages more acute. Many items had been imported since the country has no foreign exchange to buy the raw materials for production, economists said, Rawlings supporters argue that more time is needed to carry out his promised clean-up campaign against corruption. But political analysts say that for many Ghanaians living conditions are going from bad to worse and time is running out. Seasoned observers say the Ghanaians' proverbial resilience is being stretched almost to breaking point, "We are now back to where we were when Limann was ousted by Jerry," said one source, speaking of the 1981 New Year's eve coup which overthrew elected President Hills Limann - to whom Flight-Lieutenant Rawlings had handed power two years before.

According to economic sources, the plain fact is that this country on some 12 million people, once the richest in the region, is near bankruptcy. When he took power for the second time, Flight-Liuetenant Rawlings inherited a desperate and almost unmanageable financial plight.

Foreign reserves had dwindled to almost nothing, productivity had fallen to below 20 percent of capacity because spare and raw materials could not be purchased from abroad, inflation was running at over 100 percent, and the cedi was being sold on the black market at 15 times its official rate.

The economic sources said inflation was now slightly higher at between 100 and 120 percent, production capacity 59 down to 10 percent, foreign exchange as scare as ever, and the cedi selling at over 20 times its official rate of 2.75 to the dollar.

ing on a fast shrinking shoestring," one source said. "Foreign income has fallen to around $ 550 million while the oil bill alone runs up to at least $400 million. That doesn't leave much for other essentials such as drugs for the sick and spares for indus-

In make matters worse, ex-president Limann last year tripled to $360 cedis ($ 131) the price paid to farmers for a 30 kg (66 pounds) headload of cocoa. This was in anticipation of a devaluation which political sources said was to have taken place in January this year. He was deposed before he had time to carry it out and now the increase without the devaluation is crippling the treasury, causing a huge deficit, and is likely to fuel inflation further.

The economic sources said the purchase of an estimated 1982/83 cocoa harvest of 220,000 tons, just starting, will cost the government-2.6 billion cedis ($945 million), while sales abroad, at the present world market price, will only earn it some 800 million cedis ($291 million) in hard

As if the Ghanaians had not enough troubles, the weather has been playing havoc with food crops which could lead to increasing social unrest, the political sources said. - 1947 May - 1884-1948 #1947 #1

Fed fears banks shun warnings

WASHINGTON. Oct. 5 (AP) — U.S. banks may be ignoring government warnings that they are lending too much money to some economically shaky countries, the General Accounting Office says in a report to the Reagan administration and Congress.

The report made no mention of particular countries and amounts, but the report takes on added impact due to the crises in Mexico and Argentina and the ongoing difficulties of Poland and other countries.

William W. Wiles, secretary to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System. said banks are warned of the risks of lending in countries that may have trouble paying interest on debts they already owe. "Banks are expected to take those risks into consideration in arriving at their lending decisions," he added.

. The Federal Reserve ... believes that it is necessary to alert hanks to the petentially adverse consequences of concentrations of exposure, even in countries where conditions are currently satisfactory. As events in recent years have shown, circumstances can change rapidly in today's world." Wiles' comment was in a letter to the General Accounting Office, printed as part of its report, which was dated Sept. 2 and recently made available to reporters.

The office of the comptroller of the currency, which supervises banks, issues ratings on borrowing countries. Those in worst shape are called "classified" - countries which are

Players' bid to end NFL talks deadlock

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP) — Negotiators for striking National Football League players are ready to discuss dropping their demand for a minimum wage scale if the club owners agree to a system tied to a maximum wage and incentive and performance behaves, union bargainers said Monday.

The union's insistence on a minimum wage scale has been a major obstacle in negotiations and was a key factor in triggering the players strike two weeks ago. "I think we could get the membership to swallow giving up the minimum wage," union president Gene Upshaw said.

The union negotiators also said they are prepared to entertain a proposal for a "private mediation." The union's abrupt aboutface on the minimum wage scale and mediation was traced to a one-hour discussion Friday night between union chief Ed Garvey and Jack Donian, the owners' chief negotiator. "Signals were received during that conversation to lead us to believe the owners would be agreeable to an annual cap on wages." Garvey said.

Repeated phone calls to Donlan on Monday were unanswered. The management council's enceutive committee, made up of six club owners, met in New York, but council spokesman Jim Miller would not say where. He also said no post-meeting statement was planned.

Three days of negotiations aimed at ending the strike ended Saturday with no progress reported. No future talks have been scheduled

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP) — When last seen playing hockey in earnest, the New York Islanders bear the Vancouver Canucks to clinch their third straight Stanley Cup. Tuesday night the Islanders and Canucks resume their battle with slightly less at stake.

The National Hockey League title won't be on the line in Vancouver when last spring's Cup finalists open the League's 66th season Tuesday. That doesn't mean either team will take a lackadaisical approach to the game.

"We feel we have something to prove," said Vancouver right wing Stan Smyl. "A lot of people said our being in the finals was a fluke. Then the Islanders swept us. We want to show them it (reaching the finals) was for real. "The best way to: do that is to start winning from the start of the season."

After becoming the only United Statesbased team to win three straight championships, the Islanders are seriously looking at the NHL record of five straight Cups, set by Montrea: from 1950-60. But Islanders defensemen Ken Morrow admits won't he an easy task.

"Last year, we learned a lesson," said Morrew, who joined the Islanders in 1980 after skating for the gold medal, winning U.S.
Olympic hockey team at Lake Placid. He was collected three Stanley Cup rings since. "We saw how every team was getting up for us, wanting to knock us off, especially against Pittsburgh in the playoffs. We realize we can't have my letups."

Boxing feast in the offing

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (R) — Former world champions Roberto Duran of Panama, Claude Noel of Trinidad and Alfredo Escalera of Puerto Rico have signed to fight in separate 10-round bouts in Miami, Florida, next month, promoter Bob Arum announced Monday.

in Miami, Florida, next month, promoter Bob Arum announced Monday.

Main match in the Orange Bowl Stadium on Nov. 12 is between champion Aaron Pryor of the U.S. and Nicaraguan Alexis Arguello, World Boxing Council (WBC) lightweight champion, for the World Boxing Association (WBA) light-welterweight title.

Duran, who once held the lightweight and welterweight world titles, faces Jimmy Batten of Britain in a light middleweight fight. Noel, a former WBA lightweight titleholder, fights American Howard Davis. Escalera, a former superfeatherweight champion, meets Rodolfo (Gato) Gonzalez of Mexico in a lightweight encounter.

Duran, whose comeback was stalled last month when he was outpointed in 10 rounds at Detroit by Kirkand Aing, a Jamaican based in England, has a career record of 73 wins and four losses.

American football jolt leaves fans in the cold

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (ONS) — To the uninitiated, American football is a curious sport. Huge men, belmeted and padded, charge at one another, seemingly oblivious to the existence of a ball on the field. The action is intermittent. The endless statistics of yards thrown and run are mind-boggling. And the ultimate achievement, a 'touch-down,' is no such thing — it is sufficient to carry the ball into the end zone and no touching-down is required.

Like many bewildering rites the world over, its status in the national consciousness hovers between a passion and a religion, fulfilling a deep need for vicarious excitement and trihal loyalty. At the national level every seat is automatically sold for every game, and the clubs that play are so sure of their hold over the bewitched fans that they see no need to compete for revenue, but rather share stupendous TV fees regardless of who wins or losse.

By any normal standard the gladiators are well rewarded — the average salary for five months' employment as a once-a-week human battering ram is $100,000. One might therefore have thought — the odd husted limh apart — that in a troubled world, top-level Professional American Football would be an oasis of contentment and wealth.

When the 1,500 players struck on Sept. 21 for the first time in 63 years — although it was rather as if Midas rather than Oliver Twist has asked for more — it was not the rights and wrongs of the dispute that rocked the American nation, hut rather the deprivation of a twice-weekly excitement, enjoyed through the medium of the color TV set.

Sunday is the sport's hig day, and Oct. 3 was the second without football, and now it is not just the humorous columnists who are speculating how virtually half the country can survive painful withdrawal symptoms for much longer.

Ronald Reagan was asked a question on the strike at his prime-time press conference. "There doesn't seem to have been the consideration for the fan there could have been... I thought we ran the Screen Actors Guild hetter than that," he replied cautiously, therehy missing the certain victory at the polls for the Republicans this November if he had instead dug into his massive presidential powers and ordered the strikers back to play.

It is not known how many of the fans are whiling away their time, or, possibly for the first time in years, spending their time constructively. Evidence is necessarily anec-

Another, when asked what he did with the unexpected time, said morosely: "Nothing."

The more enterprising carried on as far as they could as if the strike was a nightmare from which they would soon awake. Five thousand turned up in the car park at one stadium for the tailgate picnics that they would have eaten had the games been played. One group's menu was almost as exotic as the game the fans worship — lamb, chicken wings, steamed corn on the coh.

One wife at least didn't show quite the reverence for the noble sport her husband might have expected: 'it's great, we don't have any pressure on us. We don't have to worry about the game. All we have to do is

A woman columnist wrote that her friends tend "to regard football as a male rite left over from the early palaeolithic period whea men first learned to grunt and hunt together." She cited one woman, wo tried the gamhit of informing her husband while a match hroadcast was in progress that she was leaving him. His reply? 'Just a second, honey, I want to see the replay.'

The players' complaints are that their careers are short (average 4.2 years), unpredictable (25 percent lose their jobs every year), dangerous (one man listed a chronically sore left hamstring, an atrophied left calf, a surgically repaired back, two hroken hands that eventually will require surgery, and a shoulder sore from dislocation), and that they are comparatively underpaid (baseball players average $185,000 a sca-

These woes don't attract much sympathy in a society in which 13 million people are out of work, but, since the owners are generally characterized as unattractive fat cats, the general view among the fans is 'a plague on both your bouses.'

Rezayat only team with a clean slate

By a Staff Writer

DHAHRAN, Oct. 5 — Rezayat emerged as the lone team to maintain a clean slate in the Cathay Pacific-sponsored Arabian Gulf Summer Squash League conducted by the Arabian Gulf Squash Rackets Association (AGSRA) last weekend.

With few matches remaining for the completion of the league, the race for the three divisional honors has more or less been settled. The leaders of the three groups — Agrabiyah, Byoiniyah and Subaikah — have established clear cut leads over the rest to assure themselves of the group titles.

Rezayat enjoy a commanding lead. With three matches to be played in the Byoiniyah Group, Rezayat, with 15 straight victories in hand, have run up a 39-point lead over their nearest rivals King Wilkinson, Gomads and Kanoo. King Wilkinson, with 10 wins from 14 matches, have 84 points with Gomads and Kanoo on 80 points.

But the other two groups witnessed a close tussle till the last weekend when Saudi Telephone/Cementation, from Agrabiyah Group, and Dhahran, from the Subaikah Group, created more breathing space at the

San Remo Rally Blomqvist sets early pace

SIENA. Italy, Oct. 5 (AFP) — Sweden's Stig Blomqvist emerged as the early pacesetter in the World championship San Remo Rally here Monday.

After 48 hours, the Scandinavian driver in his fuur-wheel-drive Audi Quattro has more than a minute lead over Italian-based Fiin, Markku Alen driving a Lancia Martini sports car, and four of Blomqvist's Audi teammates were also placed in the top ten as the cars headed for the rest halt in Siena. Current world championship leader Walter Rohrl of West Germany, needing to finish in the top three if he is to add to his world championship lead, had a slow start and his Rothmans Opei Ascona was lying in sixth place after 17 special stages.

But the tall West German driver was still one-and-a-half minutes ahead of his nearest world title rival Frenchwoman Michele Mouton in one of the Audis.

Mouton, who became the first woman to win a World Championship Rally when she triumphed here last year, suffered an early sethack when her car encountered a time-consuming puncture. ompson has fans in raptures

BRISBANE, Oct. 5 - They would not stop clapping for Daley Thompson when he took the victory stand. So much did they appreciate this world champion's performances in the Commonwealth Games bere Tuesday. Expectedly he won the decathlon. But he did not reach the 9000 so many were hoping he would attain.

Daley aggregated 8410 which was far below his world record performance of 8743 he recorded at Athens. But the crowd loved this bunky man with a big mouth. They say be is the Muhammad Ali of athletics. Even with his low aggregate it is certainly interesting to note the performances recorded by the Britisher. One point may be stressed, the ill wind which blew cuttingly across the Queen Elizabeth Stadium hampered almost all athletes' showing here.

Monday, Thompson recorded 10.66 for the 100 meters, 7.71 for the long jump, 15.17 meters for the shot put, 2.04 meters for the high jump and 47.59 for the 400 meters. Tuesday, he said "My performances were hampered by the wind." From the outset his husdles clearances did not go so well, he clocked 15.00 seconds for the event. His throw in the discus was 44.58 meters and 62.98 for the javelin. His pole vault clearances of 4.90 was well below his best of 5.23. He just did not bother about the 1500 as he had already clinched the title and only had to

There is bound to be a lot of exciting hap-penings at the stadium when athletics is resumed Thursday. John Walker, of New Zealand showed that be is not a has-been. Walker may be feels that he could win here. Canada's Ben Johnson was fancied for the 200 meters. The silver medallist Monday, in the 100 meters was way up at the 50 with a tremendous surge. But suddenly he stopped.

A muscle injury pulled this great sprinter out of the race. He will be missed out there in the final where Jamaica's Don Quarrie is certainly going to make his old for a medal which he could not secure in the 100 meters.

Quarrie was one of the smoothest runners in the 200 meters semifinals. He won his heat easing up in 21.56 seconds. Cameron Sharp too was good though he went out all the way till 10 meters from the tape to clock 21.6. And of course, the great Allan Wells, the Olympic silver medallist for this event, will be seeking to land a golden double. Wells was easy content to be among the qualifiers.

Jamaica's Meriene Otey ran the best 200 among the women. She brought in a time of 22.7. This tall graceful athlete, seeking to avenge her defeat at the hands of Angella Taylor, clocked at 23.82. And Australia's Denise Boyd, another contender for this title, had a time of 23.89. Who will win here is most difficult to predict though one would tip Merlene Otey to do the trick.

England won two gold medals at the track Tuesday. Daley Thompson won the second just after Judith Oakes clinched the shot put with a Games record. She was having a per-sonal war with Australia's Gael Mulhall till the fourth round. But in the fifth she came up with a mighty heave for a distance of 17.92 meters which hroke the Games record by 61 centimeters. Mulhall won the silver while Rosemarie Hauch (Canada) took the hronze.

There were two upsets in badminton Tuesday. Stephen baddeley, the top seed from England, made his exit from the individual event. He lost his first game to Australia's Mike Scandolera at 8-15 when be decided to drop out. He was running a high temperature at that time. Another upset came when India's Pradeep Gandhe accounted for the eighth seed, Graham Robson, of New Zealand in two keen games. The Indian won 15-9, 15-9.

Orok Oliver won the first gold medal for Nigeria Monday night. He had an aggregate of 192.5 in the 100 kgs, weightlifting contest to beat the Commonwealth Games record by 2.5 kilograms and also upset England's superiority. Gary Langford (England) and Kevin Roy (Canada) won the silver and the bronze respectively. In the 110 kgs contest, John Burns (Wales) won the event to emphasize that the strongest men here are from the British Isles.

Hong Kong's Solomon Lee was the leader at the end of the first days shooting in the rapid fire pistol individual event. Favorites, Alexander Taransky, the Indian coach from Australia, and India's Sharad Chauhan, were both lying in 10th position with 286 points out of 300 against Solomon's best of 292.

FAISALABAD, Oct. 5 (AP) — Spinner Abdul Qadir wreaked havoc on the brittle Australian batting as Pakistan wrapped up the three-Test series with another emphatic victory on the fifth and final day of second cricket Test at the Iqbal Stadium Tuesday.

The lifeless pitch failed to yield any response to the fiery pace of Imran Khan and Third Naqqash and the gentle swings of infuderate Nazar. Imran then turned his two spins: and they justified his faith in them amply. Ritchie and Sleep carried the score in an 176 for four to 218, when Qadir struck in

But the left-banded Wood, who is having a lean trot, succumbed under pressure soon. With Australia on 290. Wood failed to remove his bat from the line of a straighter delivery from Qasim and wickethee; :: Wasim Bari did the rest.

While Oasim and Oadir were slowly erroring the Australian batting, Ritchie was been ting with full flow. He stepped out boldly . the spinners and executed some crisp drives and cuts on his way to his unbeaten 106. The brittleness of the Australian natting was exposed when Rodney March made his exit following a between the batsmen misunderstanding. Marsb was run out for only eight.

The slide began soon after Marsh's enit with Ray Bright and Geoff Dawson following him to the pavilion without opening their account. The writing was on the wall for the Australians now. Thomson stepped out to Oadir in a hid to hit the bowler to the stands, but missed the line completely and Bari had the bails out in a flash.

Opening lead - queen of clubs.

Most mistakes are of the simple kind. Everyone errs in bridge; the game is too complicated for anyone to expect to always play perfectly. The correct philosophical approach on these occasions when you err is to try to analyze afterward why you made the mistake and not waste time trying to justify it by a specious argument that fools no one.

Let's say you're in six spades and West leads the queen of clubs. You ruff in dummy, lead the K-Q c. trumps, and play the A-K-i c. diamonds, ruffing the four and hoping the Q-J will fall.

But only the queen falls, s dummy, trump the ten c diamonds, reenter dumm with a trump, and lead a low heart on which East plays to eight. It doesn't matter wha you do now; you lose two hear tricks and go down one.

This may irritate ye because, after you reexamir the hand, you realize the making the slam was easy a pie. All you had to do we discard a heart from dumm at trick one to guarantee tr. contract. That gives yo twelve tricks regardless what happens next. This is an exaggerated case. of course, since most readers would have made the slam. But in case you didn't, you should ask yourself why you didn't. Maybe you were think ing of where you parked th car that morning, c something else equally impo-tant, instead of thinking abo.

how to make six spades. But whatever the reaso: you should try to track : down, even if you wind up as mitting you don't always pla flawlessly. It might astonis you to learn that occasional acknowledging something likthat may make you a bette bridge player.

The many did not intend to damage the subwrine but local hospitals had been alerted as _ outne precaution, the staff added.

Dooth charging would continue until the submarine was forced up, he said. He could not say how long this might take.

The depth charging marks a dramatic shift in Swedish naval practice. Previously the Navy has restricted itself to scaring off susconted submarines. The incident is the most recious since a Soviet submarine suspected of ing ran agreeted near the restricted naval hard at Karlakrona, southern Sweden, last

Tylenol victim's wife sues for $15m Company haits capsule output

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP) - The widow of a 27-year-old man who died after taking cyanide-laced extra-strength Tylenol filed a $15 million damage suit Monday against the pain-reliever's manufac-turer and a retailer. The suit was filed on behalf of Teresa Janus, wife of Adam Janus, one of seven Chicago area residents who died after taking the tainted medication last Wednesday. Named as defendants in the suit were Johnson and Johnson Products, McNeil Consumer Products Co., a division of Johnson and Johnson at Fort Washington. Pennsylvania, Jewel Food Stores, Melrose Park, Illinois, and Jewel Food Stores in Arlington Heights. Illinois.

The suit alleges that the manufacturer of the drug as well as those involved in the chain of distribution could be held responsible for the victim's death for a variety of reasons, including the design of the capsule itself.

Mrs. Janus' attorney, Leonard Ring, said it was possible that the capsules were contaminated before they left the manufacturer. "No one knows that the contamination did not occur before they left the firm." Ring said. "And even if it was an outsider, the design of capsule could be grounds for a product liability suit."

Ring said the capsule can be pried open so that a foreign substance could be substituted for the Tylenol. "A simple scalant could prevent that," Ring said. The suit also said the bottles containing the capsules and the box in which the bottles are packaged are inadequately

Meanwhile, Johnson and Johnson, has stopped making the capsule version of Tylenol, a company spokesman said Monday. The halt occurred Friday, two days after the first of seven persons died, the spokesman said.

"We've stopped making all our capsule products, regular and extra-strength Tylenol," said James Murray, a spokesman for Johnson and Johnson. "We're doing it in order to pull ourselves together. to find out where we are and what's going on."

The company is debating changing the product's packaging and "how to resume, when to resume" marketing capsules, he said. Johnson and Johnson has pulled its television advertisements for the product in the United States, Ireland and Puerto Rico, and the federal Food and Drug Administration has urged Americans to not

'Black market' springs up

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP) - Two dozen suspects in the cyanide poisonings of seven persons range from "a young hippie to an old man," say investigators who are trying to find a link between the murders and hundreds of extra-strength Tylenol capsules dumped in a motel parking lot.

The manufacture of the capsule version of extra-strength Tylenol was halted, and the Illinois attorney general said a "black market" had sprung up for the medication, which has been banned in Chicago At a press briefing, Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said Monday night some of the suspects have a history of violent crime. He did not comment further on the people under investigation.

He also said 10 to 12 more officers would be added to a task force of more than 100 persons probing the murders of the seven Chicago-area people, who died after swallowing the Tylenol that had been spiked with cyanide.

He also disclosed that preliminary lab tests found no trace of cyanide in the empty extra-strength Tylenol capsules and powder discovered in a suburhan hotel parking lot by two sheriff's deputies on Sept. 28, the day before the first deaths.

The lab results, however, don't rule out a possible link between the poisonings and the discarded capsules, said Fahner who has called the incident "one of several very substantial leads" under investiga-

"We still don't know why someone would throw out all those pills in a parking lot," Fahner said, adding the material will be tested further. After the officers handled the capsules, they suffered dizziness, nausea and vomiting. But Fahner said investigators are "reasonably certain" these were not symptoms of cyanide poisoning. Investigators believe the deaths are the result of one person "salting" store shelves with single bottles containing a few poisoned

On Tuesday funeral services were set for three members of one family who died last week after taking the poisoned drug. Adam Janus, his brother Stanley and Stanley's wife, Theresa, were to be buried after a joint religious service in Chicago.

The city has banned the sale of the best-selling pain remedy, and state officials have urged consumers not to use it until the source of the cyanide-tainted capsules is firmly established. Meanwhile, about 1,300 volunteers fanned out through the city Monday to warn residents who may not have heard about cyanide found in the capsules.

Officials of various governmental agencies sought measures to prevent future tampering with over-the-counter drugs. In the Chicago area, the Cook County Board approved an ordinance requiring such drugs be sealed before they are sold.

And now eye drops contaminated by acid

RIALTO, California, Oct. 5 (AP) - A woman has been treated for severe eye burns caused by acid-contaminated eye drops in the latest in a series of incidents in California involving the medication, according to the doctor who treated her.

It was also the second case of tainted over-the-counter medication reported in a week. Seven persons in the Chicago area have died after the extra-strength tylenol that had been laced with cyanide. Carol Sam, 28, went to San Bernardino county medical center's emergency room Monday because her eyes began burning from freshly opened visine A.C. drops she had bought at the Stater Bros. store in Rialto, said Dr. Douglas Gruzd, who was working in the emergency room.

Gruzd said a "rough test" by hospital technicians Monday revealed a "dangerous acid solution," hut further testing was plan-

There have been similar problems with eye drops bought in southern California over the last 10 months in which several people complained that the solutions made their eyes burn. There were no serious injuries.

Visine is manufactured by the Leeming division of Pfizer Inc. of Parsippany. New Jersey. A security guard said by telephone early Tuesday morning that Leeming offi-cials would not be available for comment immediately.

Gruzd said the eye drops Ms. Sam brought to him contained "much more acid" than we would expect." He said she was treated at the hospital for burns of both corneas, and patches were placed over both eyes and she was released.

"There was more acid than I would ever put in anyone's eyes," the doctor said. "Her vision is severely affected, but with any luck she will recover in two to four days." He said he expected no permanent damage.

He said he turned the drops over to the

Rialto police and that police told him that Stater Bros., a supermarket chain, had pulled all of the drops from shelves in its Rialto Rialto police dispatcher Denise Decker said she could not confirm that report early Tuesday. She said the department would not comment on the matter until chief Raymond Farmer released a statement later Tuesday. There was no answer early Tuesday at Stater Bros. offices.

Gruzd said Ms. Sam first consulted an optometrist, who suggested she go to the hospital emergency room. He said Ms. Sam "claims the seal was not broken on it."

4 Salvadorans die

EDINBURG. Texas, Oct. 5 (AP) - Police found four Salvadoran aliens dead and 11 others suffering from a lack of water in the back of an ahandoned tractor-trailer in the Rio Grande: valley, authorities said Tuesday.

The air-conditioned truck had been left on the outskirts of Edinburg Sunday night hut the air conditioning failed Monday morning, killing some of the aliens and leaving others delirious. officials said.

Some of the people in the truck had been taken off in another truck carrying Salvadoran aliens, and an attempt had been made to set the first truck on fire, with dead and suffering aliens still inside, officials said. Police found the truck Monday night when they investigated what they thought was an accident on the shoulder of a road.

A teletype report issued by the Texas Department of Public Safety said four persons were dead, two persons were taken to Edinburg General Hospital in critical condition and nine were in stable condition at the Law to disband Polish unions

WARSAW, Oct. 5 (AFP) - Solidarity, Poland's independent but now suspended trade union, will be formally disbanded according to a bill to he put before parliament here Friday.

The text, obtained by Western journalists, will likewise enable the Warsaw court to prevent Polish trade unions that replace Solidarity from engaging in activities "directed against the interests of the state."

The proposed law, which outlines the establishment of new factory level unions, stipulates that once the measure takes effect. past decisions by the courts on union registration will be nullified.

It is this clause that is expected to abolish not only Solidarity but nearly all other existing workers' organizations as well. The only unions retaining their legal identity would be those formed last December for civilian employees of the army and the Interior Ministry.

The legislation, with amendments, was worked out in cooperation with Solidarity last year. Solidarity, which received official recognition from the Warsaw court on Oct. 24, 1981, was suspended and its leadership
